Final Thoughts:

We did not need the dust to settle this morning to determine the overall winner but there were 4 excellent scores today - Alan Bressanutti and Ian Jones tied for an amazing 135 points today. Greg Harcourt and Amber Hope were not far behind with 133 and 130 respectively. If you were one of the 5 people who predicted of beating NT, way to go. The final standings show that this years winner is Don Catalano (it only took me 7 minutes to fill out your sheet Don). Second was Ian Jones, third was yours truly (who if QC had beat MB would have finished second). Fourth was Colin Partridge (who also got a friend to fill out his form for him). In a three-way tie for fifth overall we have the husband/wife tandem of Ed Wilcox and Sera Wilcox (who had her form filled out by Ed) (I am seeing a theme develop here) tied with Greg Harcourt. Congratulations to all the winners. I will be contacting you soon to discuss how I can get your winnings to you. I hope you enjoyed playing my Brier Pool and I hope it made watching the Brier interesting. When I started it 8 years ago I had hoped that it would become more popular then it did, but I was happy with the support I did get from you. I have tested different ways to at least keep this pool alive, unfortunately it becomes too difficult to moderate. So as long as the Brier has this new system, I will not be able to continue the Pool. If the CCA changes the format in the future I will definitely look to revive it. Until then we will all go back to cheering for our home province, the underdog team and Brad Gushue's team. Enjoy the rest of Brier and thank you so very much for your support. Marcus
